CEO Report

Rescue is launched! The passion to reach out to the younger generation who generally are in the dark & are being spoilt without proper guidance has motivated us to lay the blue print of Rescue. On mass, English medium education and internet access is leading the present Indian generation to many harmful western influences. Promiscuous attitudes and behaviour inspiring films and media are on the increase leading Indian youths towards self destruction.

Our vision is for PUC and Degree students to conduct awareness programs on the importance of traditional values. Rescue has lots of volunteers who do skits, dances jokes and presentation focused at our target audience.. We reached 10,000 students in a total of 20 colleges. After one of the first colleges in Adichuchanageri, A Muslim teacher approached us and gave us the contact details of all the Muslim colleges where she said they needed this program. Then a Roman Catholic Nun did the same for Christian colleges followed by a Hindu lecturer who gave us his List! This is the need of the hour to protect the moral values in India.

Why should students stay abstinent until marriage ?? and what are the effects of illegal, unhealthy, barbaric nature of youth abortions and female foeticide in India ?? The West has its divorce rate approaching 60%. Why should Indian youths follow such a disastrous path? India has 2% divorce. Mera Bharath Mahan! Let us continue in the same way.

We spent months preparing for disaster response unit which included: 10 bathroom tents, 3 toilet tents, 6 family (6 man) tents kitchen tent and a huge 66 by 24 feet meeting / hospital tent. Half way through making we did 2 day training camp at Kunti Beta.

The strain on finances still persists due to the lack of regular donors. The generous donations of our donor summed up to 1,79,000 Rupees to cover expenses in our 1st year.

CEO Report

Rescue is fully up and running! Volunteers help has led us in presenting our Ethics program to 42,500 students in 177 colleges. We have stopped all our cultural activities like dance and skit so that each of our volunteers can take a separate classroom, and we could cover more students. Taluk and rural areas are quick to agree to ethical programs and give a much larger percentage of their student population to ethical programs in comparison to the urban areas. Also, the permission letter from the Deputy Director of PUC education entrusted to us convinced the principals on the quality of our Ethics program. . We have set up a temporary web site. We have decided to step out of Mysore to reach our objective this involves raising up teams to cover the objective of reaching Karnataka on mass travelling and living with a team of volunteers for 6 weeks in simple accommodation. The decision of stepping out was fruitful We can now go viral with our vision to educate youths with family and traditional relationship values.

Bangalore was more challenging and harder to get bookings. In Bangalore, we went public and published our initial research in our 1st press meeting. Followed by 7 quick news report 'interviews' for TV news clips. We were amazed to see the news paper filled with our research, warnings and suggestions the next day. It was our 1st venture into the media. We were in awe at how the media can multiply our message to the general public. The vision was now even more clearer: colleges for the youth, media for the adults!

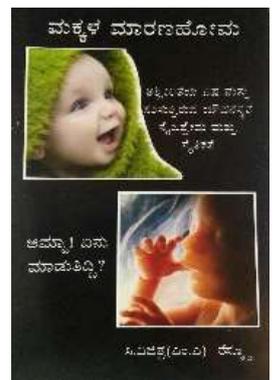

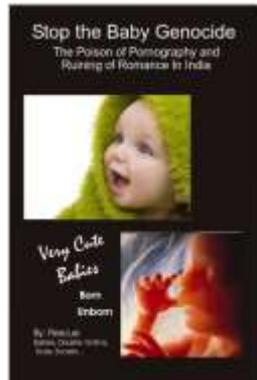

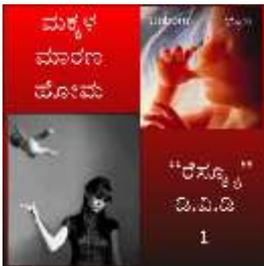

Our main research was concerning how much porn was being consumed by teenagers. We discovered and published that 70% of PUC boys in watch 7 hours a week of sex videos. Starting on an average of 9. 50% in a year these teenagers also meet their lover's in secret and spend 2 hours chatting on mobiles in the night and through on mass texting. The porn they access through their mobile constitutes to around 50% of their consumption. Hence, we started our drive to push the government to block all porn on the internet.

We invited World vision an NGO that is an expert in disaster management to conduct 3 days of training on disaster management and a 2 day camp in Kerala. The team brought the reality of disaster response and caution to be taken prior getting into action.

We published a book in English and Kannada going into more details of the consequences of porn addiction and the baby genocide. We explained how porn ruins romance, decreases attraction between couples, and how it is a menace to families and inspires divorce with all the documented perils to children brought up in single parent homes.

Our donors generously donated 3,56,000 rupees which enabled our achievements including honorariums for a strong team of 11 volunteers who have been committed full time till the end of this financial year. The strain on finances still persists due to the lack of regular donors.

Rescue 'Research and Training' Charity Trust Annual Report 2013/14

CEO Report

This year, we have reached a staggering 66,000 students in 299 colleges! We travelled to the main education centres of Karnataka including Hubli, Gadag, Belgaum, Dharvad, and Bidar. Our donors were gracious compared to the previous year and donated 7,76,000 rupees but the stress on finances continues as we struggled to give honorariums to our volunteers who work dedicatedly. In Dharvad district alone we reached 27000 students in 94 colleges in a mammoth 2.5 month tour covering all the taluks and two cities. The district collector (DC) gave us permission to use the inspection bungalows, and we also stayed in orphanages, hospitals, youth hostels and children's home free of cost!

We started teaching in professional colleges like law, medical and engineering. We would give time for debate which went on for hours! Students said, they had never heard the advantages of one life time sleeping partner and lamented that they had not heard about the dangers of porn before. We started doing successful NGO seminars and started training other NGOs to address these 'taboo' issues boldly and with wisdom and gentleness. Hundreds of students volunteered to join our team but their enthusiasm short lived as the intensity of the interest of teenagers for this social cause was not competitive enough.

The NGOs, however, started college programs especially Rescue Bangalore (alias Rhoumai) and Rescue Belgaum. They also organized a march of 200 members on the street a week after we finished speaking in 20 professional colleges. This was documented by News Papers and other media.

After our press meet in Hubli, the TV9 reporter told us his heart was burning, and he would get us on prime time news. One week later, we were called to the Bangalore studio on TV9 and took part in a 1.5 hour debate on porn. They published all our research so far in this program. We did a total of 3 TV programs with them, and our vision for media multiplied as did the extent of our coverage.

We had two training seminars for our 'staff' on human trafficking which emotionally stirred our team. We decided to include this topic in our presentations as it was so clearly connected: guys watch porn and want to try it out with young prostitutes, so more young girls are trafficked and forced into sex slavery, and also, more guys watch child or teen porn (48%) leading to greater demand for this to be produced. Hence, more young girls are abducted to supply what's demanded. Porn fuels the 3rd largest criminal activity in the world, human trafficking or present day sex slavery. Our research revealed, 72% of the boys are inspired by porn to use prostitutes, and 24% of degree boys pay for sex at some time. An astonishing 80% of degree boys watch porn and 30% of them sleep with their girlfriends. Out of which, 36% of them watch hard core violent rape porn which would result in watching 19 rapes on an average per week. We discovered these shocking statistics this year in our research which left the public spellbound. A £ million rapes are watched each day in Karnataka by college boys. We argued that this was what was causing the well documented increase in rapes and sexual harassment which gained to attention of media.

Half of the porn we discovered analysing our surveys came from cyber cafés and download shops. Hence, we began to approach the commissioners and superintendents of police in each district. In Gadag, the police responded to our plea by visiting all cyber cafés and warning the owners to install the legally required porn blocking software and reminding shops that according to It act 2008 section 67(a) it is 5 years of imprisonment for selling porn in India. In Mysore and Belgaum, we conducted raids with the police inspectors and closed down a total of 5 shops with 10 arrests. We called the press and had an excellent coverage again furthering the message of the poison of pornography.

We were requested by the principals of VTU (engineering colleges) in Karnataka to produce cyber ethics training videos to address these issues on mass. . Although the recording quality was not good, we recorded live in some colleges. We had a disaster management training camp for 5 days in Tanur-Kere to which 50 youths attended.

CEO Report

Out of Karnataka but into the winter Rescue lost a lot of its volunteers After 3 years of exponential growth, we plummeted to reach only 11,600 students this year in 74 colleges. This was mainly due to a mass exodus of staff due to lack of financial remuneration. The reason was the volunteer status of most of our employees due to lack of funds which fuelled the opposition of their families. Persecution from communities due to nature of subjects we were addressing, and As we raised the standard of ethics and education required for volunteers.

However, we progressed out of Karnataka and began to venture into surrounding states widening our motive of raising more teams and enlightening students all over India. Our initial plan included Goa and Telangana. We could not speak the local language so only English medium staff were required which proved to be very hard to find. Vernacular language educated youths can adjust to low salaries but for English medium it is a sacrifice on their lifestyle. We went from 10 teaching 'staff' to two until the end of the year when a Doctor and Psychologist joined to hold the ranks.

Hyderabad was a short powerful punch which expanded our vision. We only did a short strike for two weeks, but we were subsequently invited to speak in a parliamentary meeting after some officials discussed our research and were appalled. Later the government blocked 853 porn websites. Although only for 4 days, this block of porn websites proved to the general public that on mass porn blocking is 100% possible not only on individual computers but in the nation as well. We met with the inspector general of police for 2 meetings and had extensive discussions with the director of higher secondary education on how to incorporate cyber ethics in the syllabus.

We began to incorporate teaching against unhealthy sexual relationships such as which are depicted in porn web sites such as anal and oral methods illegal in India. In medical colleges the students showed their text books which gave the same warnings however other colleges declared they had never been warned before. These topics evoked great debates among the students who as always declared that they had never heard the reasons for the traditional values.

We produced student follow-up DVDs with more info on these topics. The generous donations of our donors amounted up to 7,13,000 rupee income. The strain on finances still persists due to the lack of regular donors.

We ran a disaster response training camp in Blue lagoon KRS back waters for 65 youths for 5 days. To-date we have sold 10,000 of our cyber ethics books to students.

Rescue 'Research and Training' Charity Trust Annual Report 2015/2016

CEO Report

Back up to 44,100 student coverage! Rescue's winter was over and into spring! Many of the old members joined back. Some of who have started doing training for other NGOs: Raising teams is the aim. Our camp was a success! We turned the beautiful blue lagoon island which has no tap water, no shelter, no toilets into a mini village for a week with 130 young people and some adults. It was like a real disaster response situation at last after 4 years of trying. Only the toilets needed improvement.

We launched into social media reaching lakhs of people on you-tube but only getting hundreds of subscribers on Facebook. We produced our 1st semi-professional videos and began to distribute them in every college. Now these colleges could have the same program the following years for their students even without our presence. The entire university of Mangalore gave us 20 minutes in their annual meeting with the Vice chancellor, and we distributed the DVDs to 120 principals.

We covered 98 colleges in Chennai, Coimbatore and Mangalore. We created a record of 14 TV channels in our Coimbatore press meet, and we entered the 1st time into the national press papers and TV station DD in Chennai. We did 4 TV full programs, 2 local and 2 state including publishing our now state wide survey results upon completing Karnataka.

In these programs, we shared that according to our research 52% of students who watch soft porn end up watching hard porn (rape and child porn), 84% of the students said that porn addiction is progressive in this way, 85% said it leads to sexual activities, 69% said that watching rape leads to the desire to rape amounting to 6 million college boys watching teen (child) porn fuelling the explosion of trafficking of minors for sexual exploitation and 3 million demanding young prostitutes.

We added to our programs the science of Intelligent Design verse the theory of Evolution. This step was taken as our research showed that 50% of the students rejected the idea of moral accountability in favour of monkeys to man mutations and natural selection. Again after the program, students said they had never heard the other side of the argument. We had our 1st international intern and hope for many more! We did not hold a training camp this year. Our donor were generous this year and supported us with 812,000 rupees , but the strain on finances still persists as the projects expand. Although our full time volunteers are now getting married and need a decent salary which we struggle to provide. The need of the hour is extensive research, more first hand statistics resulting in expenditure on meeting the mass of India. We have applied for tax exemption and hope to get it at the earliest.
